

Demographically, women make up just 36 percent of attorneys in the legal profession, as the American Bar Association reported in 2017, though women constitute nearly half the students that attend law school. Lauren Darbouze, owner and principal attorney of the Darbouze Law Group, heads the ongoing and tireless efforts of the all-female firm. The woman's touch has found a well-earned place in the heart of Western Pennsylvania family law.

Family law encompasses issues such as divorce, adoption, and child custody – legal matters that call for a heightened level of compassion and understanding. Indeed, the clients of the Darbouze Law Group know better than anyone the difference a woman's touch makes in this area of practice. As one former client stated —

Putting the Woman's Touch on Family Law

"Lauren's knowledge of the process and professional counsel, along with her caring nature, helped me immensely and I am so thankful."

As Pittsburgh's premiere family law firm, the Darbouze Law Group, with two locations, in Downtown Pittsburgh and Cranberry Township strives to provide the most convenient access to representation for its family law clients.

Yet, perhaps most noteworthy, the Darbouze Law Group achieved a reputation for aggressive representation while maintaining sensitivity towards clients. As a current client recently expressed —

"Lauren's ability to maintain such professionalism while still incorporating her heart into the cases she takes on is amazing."

Overall, this balance between courtroom effectiveness and passionate client advocacy has led the Darbouze Law Group to become a well-respected member of the legal community.

Although compassionate lawyering remains at the core of the Darbouze Law Group, the firm's significant success in divorce proceedings, child custody disputes, and child support modifications proves the woman's touch did more than just find a place in family law – it is now a force to be reckoned with.
